“ Phil, I had a Sunday School teacher who gave each person that visited her the year before her death a candle. I see this candle as her way of sharing the light "Jesus" in a dark world. Knowing that her light would soon be going out she knew she left many glowing in it's place.

The closest a man will ever come to knowing the pain of childbirth is when they have to let someone they love leave this world to go be with Jesus.

I have had the honor of seeing my son Matthew sitting with Jesus in heaven, he asked me why I was crying, {two months after his death} I told him I missed him, his replay to me after looking up and smiling at Jesus was "But Momma I'm Fine!" I had the chance to share this with Denise and I hope it brings some comfort to you.

I asked Momma once why Matthew and Angela had to die before their time, her reply was that was their "life". We may expect to live a long life but God knows the end from the beginning and they lived every moment of their life.

“ A blessing to have the Hamilton family as neighbors growing up. So many memories, camping out in the back yard, riding motorcycles, spending nights together, backyard masking tape wrestling, and so many more memories to many to mention. Blessed to have you for neighbors and friends. Praying for all of you. Love, Leesa McCollum Small
