“ Like his father, his uncles, and his grandfather before him, Hal was a fisherman. My favorite memory of Hal was when he was a teenager and came to our home in Arkansas for a family get-together. After lunch had been served, Hal was ready to go fishing. Everybody else was stuffed and content to sit and talk, so Hal headed off to the pond behind the house by himself. After a while, he reappeared at the back door with a big grin on his face. Everybody was sure he hadn't caught anything special until he held up a big bass he had snagged while fishing in the "little pool." The men jumped up, started grabbing fishing poles and gear, and were quickly out the door to catch some more of those bass. As it turned out, nobody caught a fish worth remembering except for Hal, but we all remembered the grin on his face when he came to the back door and showed us that fish.

God bless him and God bless you too Gerry! Praying that you find peace during this difficult time.

With love and fond memories,

Cousin David

“ Going to miss you uncle Hal, and I am really regretting we missed that last fishing trip. At least I have the memories of the many good times together, especially with you and Gerry on Coosa River.

You are a good man and lived a good life.

*Love you much,
Richard Cotten*
