“ Those who've spent significant amounts of time at the Gilbert Residence, didn't just answer her phone, knew how to play Rook and Aggravate like pros, and were well aware she wouldn't rest until all his needs and notions were met.

Those who've sat up late, carrying on with her at the kitchen table, know what it's like to get so tickled that they've tinkled their britches a little bit.

Those who've seen her deep in thought know how she could get to studying about things.

Those who've seen their cousins get into serious trouble—or have personally gotten into serious trouble with her—know, “Don't care comes to care.” They can also run faster than the rest.

Those who've gone to her with a serious problem know just how skilled of a listener she really was.

Those who've received a letter from her, know just how beautiful her handwriting and words really were.

Those who've walked through an angry swarm of hornets, and then went crying to her—because he didn't see what happened, but offered to give them something to cry about anyways—know her chocolate cake was the most potent pain killer known to mankind. And, if you don't know who she might have been, you don't know why we considered her to be such a Jewell.
