“ I get all worked up in the mind, it happens every year at this time. Then I realize that the anniversary of your death approaches. I am trying but I just can't seem to get myself together. I miss you. I am alone now, Jukebox is gone. I have nothing, no house, no ambitions. Skyler had a baby, you'd love her she's a cute little thing. I don't take care of myself anymore, no point in living my life. Normal folk don't understand, there's nothing after death. No God or Gods. I know, I tried every metaphysical thing to breach to door. I hope to be gone soon, in death there's the peace we never had in life...

“ Patsie and I were very close at one time during school years, particularly in junior high school. We went to class night and dressed up in pretty dresses and on graduation night, we both cried. Her family took me along on a trip to her hometown in TN and I got to meet and stay with some of her very cordial family. We went to a rodeo, had a night of scavenger hunt, danced, and even got to see Elvis's house. We shared our dreams and hopes too. Later we even had a chance to work together for a while, before losing touch. We connected again but things kind of were misunderstood long distance and we again were out of touch...as often happens in life...as most people have in their lives...a regret that one can't do anything about, except pray and know now that the person finally KNOWS you really always did care about them...and they see it from above. Yes I did care about my friend Patsie...she was the one I connected with the most during those awkward years. I think she cared about me too. I wish we let each other know that...and I do hope I am not wrong..only God knows. Rest in peace my friend Patsie...I wish you had more time on this Earth for your children and grandkids. God bless your family and my sympathies to them all.

Miss Carol, thank you so much for your kind words about my Mom. I enjoyed your stories of the time you spent with her. I'm really missing her so much over the last few days and it made me smile to know you still cared for her after all the years that passed. Blessings to you always.

Dear Lori....I thank you too. As you can see, I keep thinking about her off and on and to be truthful, I don't know why after all this time...because most people kind of move on and forget. At least that is my experience. But I cared a lot for her. We shared a lot and we really were very close for a pretty long period of time. At the end on Facebook for some silly reason, she did get angry with me and it was just over a small thing....and everyone knows FB is not a good way to communicate. But I know or I thought she did care about me as I did her. We shared a lot and ldk...I just bonded with her. And I miss her not being here and of course no way can I say I miss her more than her family. But I think of her now and then and hope someday I will also see her again. I know she loved her family, you and all and was very proud of you all. God bless Lori. P.S. Each time I see Elvis on a video etc I think of Patsie...she had to be his best fan. :)
