“ Don't know where to start. Just in shock right now. But, me and my family LOVED this guy and this family. The don't come with more class, more love or more integrity anymore. So sorry! Have lots of memories that went thru my mind, but one in particular...Brad and Haley spent the night at our home one time after an extremely late night playing softball in Nashville. Right before midnight, he says, 'I've got to go to Walmart.' I said, 'what the heck and why right now?' He said (and we joked about this every time we saw each other from then on), 'I've to to get Haley some personal items.' Well, long story short, I agreed to go with him and when we got to the little girl's underwear aisle, I said, 'Uh-UH, not me!' And we LAUGHED and LAUGHED! I said, 'this is a small town...anybody that sees me here won't know you and will wonder what tha heck I'm doing in the little girl's underwear aisle with a dude!' LOL!!! But, that's how much this guy loved his children. He wasn't embarrassed or taken aback at all about having to shop for his baby girl. And I respected him more for that and from then on than any other guy I know. Love you, bro, and I'll always regret not talking more often. Again, SO SORRY!, but Heaven is rejoicing, no doubt.
